In this context, the President of the Russian Federation Vladimir Putin emphasized the importance of coordinating joint infrastructure and development projects and programs and mentioned that the renovation of the "Ulaanbaatar Railway" JV, which is vital for the transport between the three countries, is a priority.

The parties agreed to redevelop the central railway corridor connecting the three countries and start feasibility studies. In this regard, Russia is planning to upgrade the Naushki port on the Russian-Mongolian border. In addition, the Presidents emphasized the importance of establishing east and west railway corridors and strengthening cooperation in border and customs areas.
